“ My dear Aunt Helen and my mother, Rachel, were sisters that bantered back and forth sharing stories and a bit of family gossip. These sisters loved each other. When the two were together in their later years their smiles were bright and their beauty well tended. My mother's grandchildren would look at the two sisters and whisper about them. Later it came out they called them, "Twin Hairs" ... their beautiful hair was their crowning glory and my children recognized this. As a child I remember lying on my grandmother's bed watching Helen's mother brush her silver locks. It was long and shiny and I watched in fascination as she wrapped it in a sleek bun and completed her daily beauty routine. Helen and Rachel both came by their beautiful hair and skin from their mother, Virginia Brown Clark, a true beauty that passed her strength and faith on to her daughters. They are all home now and sending us love as we in turn are grateful and celebrate lives well- lived.
